We pride ourselves on traditional hospitality - with a few quirky twists here and there - which we hope will make your 18th Century Country House stay in Birmingham an unforgettable one.

One of the oldest hotels in Birmingham, built in 1704, originally as a wayside Inn, the hotel has over the centuries become steeped in history and is recalled by many as being the most popular place to stay in Birmingham. The red brick Victorian architecture of the original building together with the large garden, lawns and plentiful car parking set us apart from other city hotels.

The 44 spacious guest rooms are traditionally decorated, and each has a flat-screen TV, tea/coffee facilities and a work desk. Some rooms have garden views, and the bathrooms have free toiletries and a hairdryer.
